Frankfort Cracks Down On All Reckless Drivers

Mayor George Sangemeister and the Village Board of Frankfort recently announced that they would not tolerate any reckless automobile driving in the Village. Last Sunday however several young fellows were picked up by village officials and charged with reckless driving. At the meeting of the Village Board on Monday evening the boys were asked to appear, also Police Magistrate J. M. Knight. One of the offenders was Delmar Genens who has been arrested several times on the same charge and has persisted in violating the reckless driving law. The other two were assessed fines and costs but Genens, due to his repeated offenses was turned over to the County Court and appeared before Judge Glenn Cowing on Tuesday. He was fined $25.00 and costs and placed under a year's probation period. He is required to report weekly to Judge Cowing. Village Attorney Albert H. Krusemark also attended the board meeting and pointed out that the reckless driving record of Genens imperiled the lives of children as well as grown ups and recommended that action be taken to stop this practice. Mayor Sangemeister expressed himself as being very much disappointed at the action of Judge Cowing. Mayor Sangemeister feels that a more severe sentence should have been meted out to Genens than was given him. Another point that Mayor Sangemeister is very much surprised at is that in spite of the fact that Genens has been arrested three times on the same charges, yet his drivers license does not show that he has ever been picked up before. Mayor Sangemeister raises the question why no record of these previous arrests have been made on Genens driving license. Mayor Sangemeister states that he and his village board are endeavoring to enforce the law to the best of their ability, but when offenders are allowed to escape with light sentences or fines it makes it very discouraging for the Village officials to try and carry out the spirit of the law.

DUPAGE COUNTY CORONER OPPONENT OF SEN. R. J. BARR

Dr. Paul A. Isherwood of West Chicago, prominent DuPage county Republican, will seek his party's nomination for State Senator from the 41st senatorial district at the state primaries on Tuesday, April 14. Dr. Isherwood will oppose Senator Richard J. Barr, a veteran campaigner, who has held the office of State Senator from this district, for 40 years. The district is made up of the counties of DuPage and Will, Senator Barr's home being in Joliet. Dr. Isherwood, who is rounding out his fourth year as chairman of the DuPage county Republican committee, can be called the most prominent Republican in DuPage county. He has been county coroner for the last 18 years and has always been active in Republican county circles. In spite of his long and outstanding service in the party ranks, his Senatorial candidacy marks but the second public office Dr. Isherwood has sought. He was persuaded to run for the office of county coroner 18 years ago by the late Dr. W. V. Hopf of Wheaton, who desired to retire from politics and induced Isherwood to run for the coroner's office, which Hopf then held. He made the race, was elected, and has held the office ever since that time. Dr. Isherwood has been active in community affairs in West Chicago. He was one of the organizers 16 years ago of the West Chicago Building & Loan Association, which organization has shown a very healthy growth throughout the years and which Dr. Isherwood has headed as president since its organization. Frankfort Church Scene of Pretty Easter Wedding

A very impressive and beautiful wedding was witnessed by a very large attendance Sunday evening, April 5th at the St. Peter Evangelical Church at Frankfort when Miss Elvira Stuckey, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Stuckey of Frankfort and Mr. Glenn Nieland, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Nieland, Frankfort were united in marriage by Rev. G. S. Gerhold. The church was beautifully decorated Easter lilies, ferns and palms which adorned the altar. Also there were two huge bouquets of pink peonies. The soft light from the candles in the back ground finished the setting.

Preceding the ceremony Mr. Glen Voss former organist rendered some very appropriate music. Mrs. Burton Breidert in her usual sweet voice sang, "Sweetest Story Ever Told" and "God Will Take Care of You."

Promptly at 7:30 the candles were lighted by the assistant ushers, Mr. Wallace Weichbrodt and Ezra Marti. By the clear ringing sound of the pealing bell all knew the time had come and all was in readiness. The bridal party followed the ushers to the altar. The ushers were John Stuckey, brother of the bride and Leroy Krohn of New Lenox, a cousin of the groom. The bride was attended by four bridesmaids, Mrs. Leroy Krohn and Shirley Pfeifer of New Lenox and Mrs. Dorothy Synder and Clara Steinborn of Tinley Park. They were identically dressed in Aqua blue transparent flowered organdy with hoop skirts. Mrs. Richard Wille, matron of honor and sister of the bride wore pink but of the same style and material as the bridesmaids. All wore contrast blushers held in place by ribbon tiaras and wore heart lockets, a gift from the bride. They carried yellow jonquils.

Rev. Gerhold gave a very befitting address touching on the points of the responsibilities of marriage and Christian living in the home followed by the double ring ceremony.

The bride looked beautiful and lovely as she walked down the aisle on the arm of her father who gave her in marriage. She wore an exquisite fitted long white flowered starched chiffon dress with train. A long lace trimmed tulle veil was caught with a tiara of white carnations and lilies of the valley. She carried an arm bouquet of white Calla lilies.

The groom was attended by his brother Earl. Both wore formal attire. The groom wore a white gardenia while the best man wore a white carnation in keeping with the ushers. Both mothers wore corsages of sweet peas.

Immediately after the ceremony the bridal party had pictures taken and a reception was held in the basement of the bride's home for 135 relatives and close friends. Mr. W. R. Hollstein, teacher of the bride was master of ceremonies and conducted a very interesting program rendered by the various friends and relatives of the couple. Many useful and beautiful gifts were received by the newlyweds and at a late hour lunch was served. Each guest received a piece of wedding cake cut by the bride herself.

A telegram from the groom's brother in California who could not attend was received the next day.

The young couple have the best wishes of friends and relatives for a long and happy wedded life.

Dr. Isherwood received his grade school education in the West Chicago schools. He then spent his first two high school years at Wheaton, as this city was without a high school. High school courses were established here and he spent his last two high school years in West Chicago, being graduated here.

Following his father's footsteps, young Isherwood turned naturally to medicine studying for a year at the University of Chicago before enrolling at Northwestern University where he received his degree. After the death of his father, he carried on the practice here and has become very well known in the field of medicine.

As soon as the folks arrived in the Russel home from the walk from the office the telephone was ringing and upon answering it, the office boy told them to hurry back to the office that Mr. Russel was very ill. Ask For Change In Plan At Sedan Prairie Meeting

About 100 residents of Frankfort and Rich Townships gathered at Sedan Prairie Wednesday evening at a protest meeting against the proposed organization of the Tinley Park high school district which would take in a portion of Rich and Frankfort Townships in addition to Bremen Township.

Attorney Albert H. Krusemark of Frankfort was the spokesman of the meeting and he took the stand that inasmuch as the Federal government is banning all building operations of public and private nature after June 1 of this year, it would be impossible to erect a school building at this time and in such event it would mean that the taxes would be spread over the property in the proposed district resulting in considerable money being piled up, which would, Attorney Krusemark contended, be rather unpatriotic and it would be better for the district to invest this money in war bonds or stamps.

Mr. Krusemark further contended that small community high schools could not afford as complete a course of study and background in competition with such high schools as Bloom, Thornton, Joliet and Blue Island. Mr. Krusemark further pointed out that it would be wiser for the proponents of the proposed High school district as well as the opponents to get together and see what could be done to either withdraw or change the petition which has been filed with the Cook County Superintendent of Schools, Noble J. Puffer for the creation of a Tinley Park high school district.

A number of Tinley Park people who were in favor of this district attended the Sedan Prairie meeting. The committee consisting of John D. Baden of Matteson as chairman, and Albert Urubach of Tinley Park secretary was appointed at the close of the meeting. Another committee consisting of Attorney Albert H. Krusemark as chairman, Lawrence Marquardt, and Arthur Henke was appointed to confer with the Tinley Park group now backing the proposed community high school district.

A meeting is to be held sometime next week between the two groups to see what can be done to adjust the matter in such a manner as will be of mutual advantage to all concerned.

HELL'S TRIUNE

(Written for The News-Bulletin)

In declaring, "War is hell," Sherman named the monster well: Ay, today's war-world brings Hell on wheels—Hell on wings!

Over hell's polluted lanes, Chaos, prince of slaughter reigns, Flying from his ship of State Is the damning emblem, "Hate!"

Hell's advisors hiss their creed—"Plunder! Pillage! ghoulish greed!" But that harvest ne'er but net Desolation, death and debt!

Yesterday, to-day, tomorrow—Disappointment pain and sorrow. War, the game of fools and knaves Pays in countless unknown graves.

Desolation, all the way! Still, we find grim Fate, today, Introducing hell's triune Hitler, Mussay, and Nippon.

Australia, Country of Fighting Men, Faces Greatest Struggle in History

Land 'Down Under' Welcomes Yank Assistance.

By CLIFF LANGE
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Australia, the last practical Allied base for attack against the Japs, is similar to the United States both in size and attitude of its people.

It wasn't but a few years ago—1938—that Australia celebrated its 150th anniversary. But now it is girding and ready for a battle to the death against the foe creeping down from the north, engulfing all territories and peoples before it, like the Biblical deluge.

Most of Australia's inhabitants are of British extraction. But in spirit the "Aussies" are just as American as they are British. The welcome given to American troops upon their arrival there, the demand for General MacArthur to lead the Allied forces in the fighting zone, all clearly show the attitude of the Australians.

Australia's 7,000,000 population is spread over almost 3,000,000 square miles of territory as compared with the United States' total of 133,000,000 population in approximately the same amount of space.

Australia, like our state of Georgia, was first settled by English convicts. That both groups did a good job is evidenced by today's far-reaching developments.

Today most Australians live within a narrow 100-mile coastal belt along the south and east. About half of the population is in the nation's half-dozen largest cities. Sydney, having a million and a quarter inhabitants, is the largest; Melbourne, with a little more than a million, is next largest. Both of these cities are practically at the opposite end of the continent from Darwin, which has been bombed repeatedly.

Vital Defense Road.

From Darwin to the above mentioned metropolitan cities it is little more than 1,500 air-miles. Canberra, the nation's 15-year-old made-to-order capital, is located about 100 miles southwest of Sydney, on the road to Melbourne.

Australia's transportation system now playing a very important part in the nation's defense (and coming offense) is peculiar in that many of the railway lines extending inland come to an abrupt end.

It wasn't until but a few years ago that the railway extending southward from Darwin was connected, by a defense highway, with the railroad extending northward from Adelaide to Alice Springs. This road is the artery through which Australia supplies men and materials to the northern battle scene.

With the exception of most of the coastal regions, the greater part of Australia's central territory is flat, arid and semi-arid land which is practically defenseless. More than a third of it is actual desert. It is in the semi-arid zones that the nation's vast scattered ranches and large grain producing centers are located. As the huge stretches of land located here are irrigated, this section of Australia will be one of the most fertile zones when the war is ended.

As for natural resources, the nation has everything needed for war activity except oil. The oil industry is a recent development and not very encouraging insofar as amounts produced. Last year's production totaled only a few hundred barrels.

The European war curtailed agricultural and grazing activities, but operated to speed up the nation's expanding factory life. Towards the middle of 1939 there were nearly 27,000 plants employing more than a half million people. Reports since then have not been made public.

As gold helped considerably to develop California, its discovery in Australia helped to open up vast territories there. It was first discovered in 1843 and the influx of prospectors raised the population in seven years from around 200,000 to more than 500,000. A story is told about an Australian who crossed the Pacific to take part in the California gold rush. While prospecting in California he noticed that the gold bearing rock and soil of that state had a marked resemblance to territory he had seen in his native land. He found his hunch to be correct when he returned there to prospect.

The Commonwealth of Australia is a self-governing nation, sharing British dominions, to the British king. The Commonwealth is comprised of six colonies called "Original States." They are New South Wales, Queensland, South Australia, Victoria, Western Australia, and the island of Tasmania—plus the Northern Territory and the Canberra Capital Territory.

It wasn't until 41 years ago that the six original states united to form a commonwealth. Up to that time there had been many inter-state quarrels—some of them going so far as to create trade barriers against each other.

Preparing Since '38.

The Australian federal government is similar to our own in many ways. It has a senate and a house of representatives. In case of a prolonged disagreement with the house, the senate can be dissolved and a new one elected. The house, too, can be dissolved under certain exceptional circumstances. A governor general—representing the king of England—is the executive head of the government.

Since the inception of the Labor party in 1933, the government has been vigorously building up the munitions and industries and expanding its land and air forces. In 1938, on down to the present day, the government, as part of its national defense policy, has been urging the manufacture of fuel oil and gasoline from its own coal, and the creation of large plants for the manufacture of industrial alcohol.

At no time during the Twentieth century has this spunky nation deduced itself as to what country was its coming enemy. Trouble, which all Australians saw on the southwest Pacific horizon, had been brewing ever since 1935. In that year the tariff laws which gave a marked preference to Great Britain in the sale of cotton goods in Australia. Japanese markets were practically smashed. As a result the Japs virtually boycotted Australian wool in retaliation.

Today the Australians are fully aware of how correct they were in their assumptions concerning the over-ambitious Japanese. Today, this scrappy little nation that covered itself with glory in World War I, is ready for a repeat performance. The Aussies are determined that their nation shall remain as they have always had it—a land of individualists, rugged and aggressive—a land free from the imprint of a tyrant's heel.

Prime Minister of Australia, John Curtin, who recently clashed with the London government over the selection of Australians who take part in imperial government affairs.

Still Has a Frontier Spirit.

The Yankees, "down under" in Australia, at least 7,000 miles from their native land, will be learning much about the Aussies, and the land they are helping to defend.

True, the Yank will have time to absorb but little of the past history of the nation. He will, however, learn all about present-day Australia for the Aussies, in addition to being excellent fighters, are definitely proud of their native land without being intensively nationalistic.

The Yank will understand the spirit of the country by remembering that Australia today—outside of its metropolitan cities—has the same "frontier" spirit which lived in the United States about 50 years ago.

The average American citizen and the average American soldier associates Australia with kangaroos, early experiments in social legislation, a national scourge of rabbits, and some remarkably courageous fighting men who covered themselves with glory battling the Germans during World War I.

Then the Yanks will see that the cities are just as modern as those in the United States. The East and West coasts of the United States, where the majority of large cities are located, is somewhat like the east and south coasts of Australia where the most important cities such as Sydney, Melbourne, Adelaide, Brisbane, and Maryborough are situated.

They will show the Yanks that despite their arming to the hilt, they aren't by nature warriors, nor do they have disturbing aspirations to be such saber-rattling people.

Waitress' Murder Mystery Solved By Camera Eye

Slayer Breaks Down Under Questioning; Tells Story Of Love and Jealousy.

PHILADELPHIA. — Philadelphia's say Detective Herman Goldstein has a camera eye. His latest exploit of this kind occurred the other day—a Friday afternoon—when a large packing case in a debris filled alley was found to contain the body of a pretty blonde.

She had been dead about 10 hours. Goldstein looked at her and recalled that he had seen her before, just once, when she was working in a Ridge avenue restaurant. Straight to the restaurant went the police and ascertained that the young woman was Mary Burbulis, 22 years old, alias Mae Burns, formerly of Morristown, N. J.; a waitress. The restaurant fronts on Ridge near 12th street, not far from 13th and Hamilton streets, where the death alley is.

Found in Packing Case.

According to the restaurant folk, among them Waitress Stella Burkhardt, a suitor of Mary Burbulis had coffee in the establishment at 8 a. m. that day. It must have been about the time the girl was killed. The detectives promptly set out in search of the suitor, and it was only four hours after the discovery of the body in the packing case that they found him at 11th and Spring streets. He proved to be William H. Delancey, 33 years old, alias Ray Harris DuBoise, alias George Ryan; native of Philadelphia; alumnus of the prison at Michigan City Ind. When first approached, the suspect gave his Du Boise alias and said he was an unemployed short order cook.

Police said Delancey had served a four year prison term in Michigan City for larceny; had been arrested in Washington, D. C., for conducting a "badger game," and in Philadelphia in 1938 for carrying concealed deadly weapons. He is a native of Philadelphia, but has roamed over wide areas of the country.

Through the night of questioning, detectives said, Delancey remained comparatively calm. He was constantly furnishing police with the names of other men with whom the girl had associated during the butterfly existence she had led since leaving her home in Morristown to come to Philadelphia.

Killer Breaks Down.

About noon on the day after the slaying, and after Delancey had asserted his ignorance of the whole affair all night, Stella Burkhardt arrived at detective headquarters. This was embarrassing, for Stella served him that cup of coffee at 6 a. m. when, according to his protests to the police, he was far away from the murder neighborhood. And that was about the hour of Mary's death.

Miss Burkhardt had been there only a few minutes, according to Captain Engle, when Delancey broke down and began to sob out his story.

"I loved her," he wailed, "but I was jealous of all those other men she was going around with. I did it because I was jealous."

Delancey was quoted as saying that he and Mary often had discussed plans to marry, and about two months before even had purchased a marriage license, but in recent weeks she had spurned him and had taken to running around with other men.

Three on Match Proves To Be Unlucky Here

SELMA, ALA.—So you do not believe that popular superstition about "three on a match." Well, three soldiers stationed at an airfield near Selma do. Here's why:

The three lit a cigarette each from the same match.

First their tent filled with smoke and one of the trio climbed aloft to free the soot from the pipe. Meantime, a second tossed an empty bottle aloft, to be used to tap the pipe to loosen the soot. He missed the catch, and the bottle struck him full in the face.

In the excitement that followed, the soldier who pitched the bottle started forward, stepped into a hole and badly wrenched his ankle.

Meanwhile, soldier No. 3 inside the tent, grabbed for a towel to use outside and smashed his hand in the locker door.

None of the casualties was serious, but there are three soldiers who are no longer lighting cigarettes "three on a match."

Nurse's Appendix Halts

Convoy on Way to Ireland

YOUNGSTOWN.—Second Lieutenant Florence M. McBride may never be able to boast that she won the war, but she can boast that she stopped an American convoy of troops.

Miss McBride was one of the nurses sent to Ireland with American troops. Somewhere in the North Atlantic she suddenly was stricken ill and an immediate operation was necessary.

For a half hour the entire convoy stopped and wallowed in the sea as Lieut. Com. Lionel S. Auster, a New York surgeon, performed the operation. Miss McBride was recovering nicely when the convoy reached Ireland a few days later.

Government Anxious To Keep Non-Essential Buying Down . . . Most Manufacturers Want More Restriction on Themselves . . .

(Bell Syndicate-WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON.—There is probably more to be said in favor of a sales tax at the present moment than at any time in this country's history. Incidentally, the most formidable group of opponents the sales tax has ever had, the large store owners, have virtually flopped over to its favor, while the chief argument against it—the one which has always moved President Roosevelt—has disappeared for the duration.

Let's consider the President's previous objection. It was that a sales tax was not only a tax on people least able to afford it, but that it cut down consumption, and hence helped to restrict unemployment.

This argument vanishes into thin air for the duration. The government is anxious for people not to buy things they do not have to have. The government wants this for two reasons. First, it wants to limit all non-war production as far as possible. Second, it wants the savings effected by the people NOT buying those things translated into government bonds.

There is no question of employment—for the duration. The government needs the work of every man and woman possible for war production. It will continue to need them, more and more, so long as the war lasts.

Sales Tax Advantages

Thus in so far as a sales tax operates to curtail buying of nonessentials—and perhaps even some things that are ordinarily regarded as essentials—it is all to the good.

But what must be considered here is the effect of all this AFTER the war. This does not mean that anything that will help in the war should be stopped because of worry about its later effects. But it does mean that congress should consider what steps must be taken immediately after hostilities are over.

When this war ends, whether soon or late, and assuming of course that we win the war, for otherwise nothing will make any difference, we are going to be faced with a terrific and almost inconceivable debt. So taxes must continue at a rate which will continue to hold down improvement in our standards of living.

BUT—when that time comes there will be a need for every possible encouragement to employment—to greater national income so as to spread the tax burden thinner. So it might well be that the thing to do about the sales tax would be to eliminate it the moment hostilities stop, and the swing back to normal from the war effort sets in.

And they must have jobs.

Few Stockholders

Hurt by Profit Slash

One of the shrewdest attacks on the attitude of certain labor leaders that has yet been made came naturally enough, from Rep. Howard Smith of Virginia.

There is no intent here to accuse Mr. Smith of trying to deceive, but he set up as an "attack" on profits by capital a straw man which can easily be knocked down.

The point is that the alleged great profits of manufacturers on war contracts are nothing like so dear to the hearts of the manufacturers and their larger stockholders as the union labor leaders would have the public believe. Most of them would be delighted at some restriction by the government which would cut those profits down to what almost anyone would consider a very reasonable figure indeed.

They want this for three different reasons. One is that it would tend to take them out of the hot spot, where they are the target for every demagogue, be he labor leader or politician, in the country.

They might be able to stand such criticism if they were benefiting substantially, but it irks them considerably when they know perfectly well that just a few years back they could have made much larger profits in peace time.

The second reason is that they fear continuance of the present situation would make the probable wave of inflation certain. No one in business wants to see that.

Still a third reason is that the manufacturers are looking forward to after the war. They know that labor conditions imposed on them NOW will continue, and continuing, make trouble, during what may be a very trying period of reconstruction.

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood. You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feet constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination. Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

When Australia raised the age limit for enlistment to 40 years, these men were among the many who answered the call to fight for the motherland. Shown here are veterans of World War I who took part in the fierce fighting with the Germans in France.

Animal Curiosities in Store for Yanks

There are many other unusual animals which the Yankee doughboy might see in Australia.

Like the early days of the West in the United States, in the north section of Australia, live nomadic tribes who make fires with sticks and kill their game with spears. Like many tribes of Indians in early U. S. days, these nomadic people are quite harmless, some of them being friendly with the Australian "frontier" people.

The Yankee soldier, remembering his history, will be interested to learn that in the far north section of Australia, buffalo roam over an area as large as the British Isles, in a territory where few white men live.

There are many other strange creatures there that are peculiar to Australia. There is the wombat which burrows deeply, the dingo and the spotted native cat, and the mole, blind, deaf and dumb.

DEEP WATER ISLAND

by ALAN LEMAY

W-N-U-RELEASE

INSTALLMENT NINETEEN

This is the concluding installment to this story of the DEEP WATER ISLAND, Alaska.

"What is this?" Dick asked.

"Didn't you know that James Wayne has been making additional payments on Alakoa, all through the last twenty years?"

"I thought he was; I couldn't prove it, I guess."

"You can prove it now. That's a receipt from Garrett Waterson for two hundred and seventeen thousand dollars. Incompetent or not, he was properly paid for Alakoa; and that receipt acknowledges it. I thought I'd better get it for you—and save you a headache."

"Karen," Dick asked, "why have you done this?"

"I'm sick of having you worry for fear I'm going to get your island away from you. I don't want your old island. You'd better take care of that receipt, and not sit there creasing it all up. Your brothers are going to want it—and I suppose, after all, Alakoa is more theirs than yours."

He wondered irrelevantly if he should tell her that this was not so; but let it pass. "What are you going to do now?"

"I'm going back to San Francisco and look for a job."

"But Garrett Waterson will want—"

"I'm not going to fasten onto him. He's got troubles of his own."

There was a long silence after that. "It seems to me," Dick said at last, "that neither one of us has been very sensible about any of this. All the way along we've kept fighting over the most trivial things—lands, and grandfathers, and Kanaka girls, and who busted a lei on James Wayne's desk. It certainly looks as if we ought to run out of things to fight and quarrel over, pretty soon."

"Don't you know," Karen asked, "whose lei that was? Don't you know who was with James Wayne when he died?"

"I don't even care," Dick said. "I care. It's taken me a week's detective work even to find out what you were talking about. And I'm going to tell you about it, whether you're interested or not."

"I just don't think it's important now," Dick said.

"I do. Because that was what really broke us up. It made you say things to me that were perfectly awful—unforgivable things, Dick. And I didn't know, then, even what you meant when you talked about a broken lei."

"If only you had told me—"

"I couldn't tell you because I didn't know. I know now. When you went into your uncle's office, and found him dead, there was a broken lei of ginger blossoms on the floor; and you thought that it was the lei you gave to me. But I've had to talk to Tsuru, and Lilua, and Hokano, before I even found out that much."

"You mean to tell me that you really weren't there? You weren't with James Wayne that night at all?"

"Of course not. But I've pieced together what happened, now. The lei you gave me that night was a lei that Lilua made for you; but that was not the only lei she made. She made another lei for Hokano; and he was wearing it, when he came looking for her that night."

"You mean that it was Hokano who—"

"Hokano was looking for Lilua. I could have told him where to look for her. But he couldn't find her because she was in your room."

"Karen, I swear that nothing—"

"Oh, I know. As a matter of fact—" a malicious little twinkle flickered in Karen's eyes—"I think I had already warned you to lock your door. But Hokano didn't know anything about that. He saw James Wayne's light; he stepped into James Wayne's office through the window, and demanded to know where Lilua was. Of course your uncle was furious that a large, very wet Kanaka should come crashing into his office through a window. His anger was too much for him, on top of everything else. He stood up and threatened Hokano; and then just suddenly collapsed and was gone. Hokano leaned across the desk, to see if he was really dead. The ginger blossom lei caught on the corner of the desk and broke; and just then Tsuru came tapping at the door, peddling her glass of milk."

"Hokano told you this?"

"Most of it. Who else could? He was the only one who knew."

"This is all very surprising," Dick said.

"I don't think so. I don't think it's even interesting. I went to the trouble to find out because I wanted to know what you were talking about. I can't remember now why I thought it mattered."

"And I still don't think it matters," Dick said. "I don't think it matters at all what either one of us has said or thought or done."

"In short," Karen said, "you haven't a leg to stand on; so, that being the case, you favor calling the whole fight off."

He stepped into James Wayne's office through the window, and demanded to know where Lilua was.

"I have no doubt," Dick agreed, "that I am a complete fool. Worse than that—much worse—I am also unlucky. I simply don't get the breaks—and I suppose that's the worst thing you can say about any man."

"You get as good breaks as anyone does. The principal trouble with you is that you don't show any sense."

"I think it's time for both of us to show a little sense. People never get anywhere trying to dope out who was to blame for what. If people like to be together, that should decide what they're going to do."

"Such as—?"

"What's the sense in going to Honolulu? I don't have to go to Honolulu, and neither do you. The Holokai can just as well put about and lay a course for Nuku Hiva. How do you know you wouldn't like Nuku Hiva? I'll bet any amount you'll think it's a whole lot prettier than San Francisco."

"My word," Karen smiled faintly. "I believe it's meant to be a proposal!"

"Call it what you want to," Dick said. "Don't you think—don't you think—"

"Would you like to know what I think? I think you're tiresome. You sit there talking on and on, when all a person wants is to go to sleep. Now, you can sit there talking to yourself as long as you want to, but I'm going to sleep, anyway," said Karen.

Dick stood up. "I've got a great mind to set a course for Nuku Hiva anyway, and make you like it!"

Karen laid her head on her arms and closed her eyes. "You're always shanghaiing somebody," she said. "But ask yourself—what does it ever get you?"

Dick stood looking down at her quiet face, and wondering why he had ever hoped to understand this girl. "Nothing, I guess," he admitted at last.

CHAPTER XVII

He went out into the main cabin, sat down at the table, and laid out a hand of solitaire; but when it was laid out he sat staring vacantly at the cards. He had reason enough to be sick of solitaire. Then presently he became aware that he was infinitely weary, and that he had as much reason as Karen to be in need of sleep. He laid his head on the table, convinced now that there was no longer on the face of the sea any uncertainty worth keeping a man awake; and was almost immediately asleep.

He must have slept a long time, for when he awoke daylight was coming in the ports. In front of him on the table had been placed a tray containing a wilted sprig of celery, and a glass of cold water that sloshed about with the Holokai's roll; but it didn't seem to him much of a joke.

Then as he shook the sleep out of his eyes he was suddenly aware that something was wrong. The sun appeared to be rising in the west; and when he had thought about that for a minute he knew that they should have been in Honolulu many hours ago. He could hardly believe that the Holokai had been into Honolulu harbor, and set Karen ashore, and put to sea again, without waking him up; but that was the only explanation he could think of at first. Certainly the Holokai was tearing southward at a roaring clip.

He went on deck and found Inyashi at the wheel. "What's the idea of not waking me up in Honolulu?"

"Honolulu?"

"Don't stare at me like a block-head!" Dick shouted. "What time did we leave Honolulu?"

"We—we haven't been to Honolulu, Captain."

"You haven't been—well, where do you think you're going?"

"Why—Why—Oh, I was afraid of this," Inyashi moaned.

"Well, speak up! What do you think you're doing?"

"Miss Waterson—Miss Waterson—she said you had changed the course, Captain. She said you wanted me to bring about and lay for the Marquesas. She said you had decided not to go to Honolulu. She said you were asleep, and she said I was supposed to—"

"Dear heaven," Tonga Dick said. "You go ask her yourself. She's up there in the bow. Captain Tonga, I try to set what course you say. But I didn't know what to do when she came and—"

The mainsail was partly to blame; the Holokai's low-swung booms made part of the deck invisible from the wheel. But the real reason that Dick had not found Karen before now was that he had not expected her to be there. It had been very definitely fixed in his mind that she was gone from his ship, gone altogether out of his life.

He went forward hesitantly, partly humble, partly dazed by his luck. He stood close beside her at the rail, and drew her against him with one arm.

"Well, good morning!" Karen said. "Do you always sleep in your clothes? Because I don't think it does them any good."

Dick said stupidly, "We—we didn't go to Honolulu after all, did we?"

"Certainly not. Silly effort of yours—chasing off to Nuku Hiva. Did you think you'd get away from me as easily as that?"

A great cloud of flying fish went up before the bows of the Holokai, making a flickering rainbow on the face of the warm sea.

THE MISSION OF THE SEVENTY

LESSON TEXT—Luke 10:1-7, 17, 21-24.
GOLDEN TEXT—The harvest truly is great, but the laborers are few: pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he would send forth laborers into his harvest.—Luke 10:2.

Working with Christ for the salvation of men has been the privilege of believers since the time He chose the twelve. We learn today that there were at least seventy more whom He considered dependable and worthy to be sent forth. Knowing how brief was the time before His death, the Saviour called, commissioned, and cared for them as they went two by two, personally to evangelize "in every city and place."

I. Sent to Serve Christ (vv. 1-3).

Prayer is back of the calling of laborers for Christ. God waits for His people to lay before Him the need, and to enlist His grace in moving upon the ones who can best serve Him. There is mystery here which we cannot fully understand, but it is perfectly clear that prayer is the power which has been given to the church with which to "move" the hand of God. The reason the laborers are so few, even in our day is evidently, then, because there has been so little prayer.

Observe that the Lord sent His servants "two by two" so that they could encourage and assist each other. Christian work is best done in Christian fellowship. The "star performer" or the "lone wolf" may be acceptable in business or social life, but he has no place in Christ's program, unless by His special call and guidance for some particular task, such as pioneer work.

He sent them to go "before His face"—what a glorious place to be! That means that He was watching over them, expecting them really to "labor" for Him. But notice also that in loving thoughtfulness they were—

II. Sustained by Christ (vv. 4-7).

It is well when workers go out that they have proper backing. We speak of the "board" which is behind our missionaries. That is right and proper, but above all there must be the assurance of the provision and protection of Christ.

They were not to be concerned about money. Christ had already moved upon the hearts of His people to see that the laborer had "his hire"—which was food and shelter (v. 7).

Time is what life is made of, and the servants of Christ were not to waste it in lengthy oriental salutations (v. 4), or going from house to house to be entertained, thus losing much time and strength.

Nor was he to strive or become angry if some one did not receive him and his greeting of "peace" (v. 6). In any case his word would return in blessing upon himself (v. 6), and he could go on to another house. The point of all this is that the expectation of the Christian servant is from his Master, Christ, whose business requires diligence and haste (I Sam. 21:8b).

The outcome of such service is revealed in our third point.

III. Successful Through Christ (vv. 17, 21-24).

The seventy returned rejoicing that even the demons were subject to them in Jesus' name. He still has power over the demons of our day. Would that the church wielded that power more effectively!

While it is a great thing thus to see the power of God at work, Jesus told them in verse 20 that an even greater thing is to have one's name written in heaven. That means that we ought to be much concerned not only about having our own names written there, but the names of all those whose lives we touch—at home, at work, anywhere.

The secret of the disciples' victory is found in the statements which Christ in all humility and honesty made about Himself (vv. 22-24). He is the one to whom "all things are delivered"—unlimited in authority and power. The mystery of His person and work is not something man can think out or fully comprehend (how foolish have been the attempts to do it!) for He is God. The fact that the Father had revealed these things to the seventy humble, ordinary men caused Christ to magnify His Father's name in praise and prayer. Spiritual insight (vv. 21, 24) is something only God can give, and often He can give it in full measure only to humble and lowly men. "Men like D. L. Moody, who became spiritual giants, were usually humble men from lowly walks who gave themselves wholly to God" (B. L. Olmstead).

Need to Slow Up

The world is going too fast! Even the Church needs to slow up for it is attempting too much in social programs and is losing spiritual poise in many places. Paul said to the Church, "Put on the whole armor of God." The whole armor takes time to put on, yet it is dangerous to leave off any part of it.—Rev. A. E. Gregory.

Citizens Service Committee

Dear Friends:

Your very welcome letter arrived yesterday. I can assure you all I was a very surprised sailor when your message of greeting was delivered to me. I'm sure each of us in the Service deeply appreciate the consideration shown us by the people of our home town. Even though we fight for our glorious country as a whole our inspiration lies in our homes and cities whence we came.

Let it be said here that we who are far from our native shores feel heavily the separation from our beloved land. It will soon be two years since I last trod on our continental soil, and how long yet to go. Even so it is far better to engage the enemy far out here than to await his hammering at the gates of our homes. Our fathers set a great example at Chateau Thierry and at Belleau Wood, a reputation of bravery and skill we, their sons shall do our utmost to uphold. To all our comrades and fellow warriors of '17 and '18 we say, if we can do half as well as you all did the struggle shall be won.

The United States now faces as great a danger as ever they were confronted with. Either the nation stands in greater glory than ever before, or she falls, with all Americans resolutely behind us we shall not fail. I would very much like to give a description of our activities here in Hawaii but as you all realize censorship in its extreme scope has had to be applied to all information of the least value to the foe. This Colition we fight is noted for its ability to expand and utilize seemingly harmless bits of Dope to our definite disadvantage. Someday all will be told but until then let us all say, babble may lose the battle.

The committee's offer to send a weekly copy of the Tinley Times is gratefully accepted by this sailor. Each issue shall be expectantly awaited. Many pleasant memories of those I knew and remember so well will be aroused as I read of their activities. There's Alvin and Harold Andres with whom I spent many a day husking and threshing, to you I say I'll be seeing yah' and Geo. and Louis Schuldt. How much I would like to set down at a harvest table with you two again. George's sense of humor was amazing. I wonder what he would think of a thousand acre field of Pineapples, Hah?

Give my aloha to Wesley Roemer and to Mr. William Holstein. Mr. Holstein was my Sunday School teacher at the little Church at the crossroad. He, I remember quite well and look forward to seeing him again.

As I near the end of this brief message to you all who remember and think of us at the front I again express my appreciation and pleasure upon receipt of your letter and look forward to seeing everyone again when our nation stands mightiest among the families of the earth.

Sincerely yours,
John Andrew Lahti, AMM 2C, U. S. Naval Air Sta. P.H.T. Hawaii. P.S. I do not need a sweater but we lads always appreciate razor blades, double edge. The Navy does use the Army's system of rating its men. My rate, Aviation Machinists Mate, second class corresponds to the Army of Platoon or Staff sergeants, or more accurately technical Sergeant second class.

March 23, 1942

Dear Folks:

Well here I am in Salt Lake City and boy what a place this is. The City is built right at the foot of the Mountains and the Air Base is only four miles from town. Since arriving I haven't done much. I've been put in charge of training 75 new men. I haven't got any rating for it yet but I hope I will soon. This outfit I'm in is ready for active service and maybe in a few months I'll get a chance to fight. At least I hope so. After all how the devil can we win the war just staying at some base training all the time. I've done a little flying since I've been here and I might get a chance to be Co pilot on a B17. This next week I'm supposed to get a flight check in an advanced training and if I pass it I may get my chance to fly for the U.S. When I got in the plane the other day it reminded me of the days when I used to drive half of Tinley Park to distraction. If I really did scare some of you folks I'm sorry but I'll probably be back and do it all over again. But this time it will be for a reason.

I know all the other fellows in the army will read this letter so I'd like to say hello to all of them and how about a letter from Carmichael. See you all in Tokyo fellows and the drinks are on me.

Yours sincerely,
John Gotham, 33 Reconnaissance, 305 Bombardment group, Air base, Salt Lake City, Utah.

Dear Folks:

How is good old Tinley Park. I'm fire hope this letter finds you the same. The weather out here this past week was kind of cool. We also had a lot of rain. There's not much news out here. Sure enjoy the Tinley Park paper. Thanks for the Kit. This Sunday is Palm Sunday a few of us boys are going to Mineral Wells to Church I suppose there are quite a few boys and girls that are getting confirmed in Tinley. Some of the boys that live close by are getting off Easter.

I haven't a snap shot of myself so I'll send a picture instead. Well, this is all I know. Wishing every one a happy Easter I'll say cheerio for now.

Citizens Service Committee:

Dear Friends:

I am sorry to hear that you did not receive my letter. I wrote a letter to you the 15th of March and I am sure it should have reached you before you wrote your letter. I can't figure out what happened to it, I wrote a letter to my Mother the same day.

Well friends, I am feeling fine. I was in the hospital in Texas for three weeks but since I arrived up here I am feeling swell. The weather up here is a little bit cooler than it was in Texas but I like it better. Also the food is better. That is the main thing.

Yes Friends I received your shaving kit and toilet articles and it is really swell. Everything a soldier can use. Thanks a million. So far I have only received one Tinley Park Times paper. I really enjoy reading all the news from good old Tinley Park and also the Service Column is really swell.

Dear Friends at present I don't have a picture of myself but as soon as I have some taken I will send one.

This is a swell camp up here. We have beautiful scenery all around we have mountains and small streams right close by. One bad thing about those mountains tho, we have to climb them. This camp is surrounded by small towns on all sides. We go right out the front gate and we are in town Boston is about 35 miles east of here. I went in there last week and it is really a swell city.

Well I had a hard day today. I was K.P. all day. One good thing about K. P. you can get all you want to eat.

Well friends I will sign off for this time and again thanking the Community for all they are doing for the Soldiers. That is one nice thing about Tinley they never forget the boys who have left town.

Sincerely,

Citizens Service Committee:

Dear Friends:

All I can say is thanks. Thanks for the things that you are doing for us boys. I'm sorry to say that as much as I would like a sweater I can't use one. It gets plenty hot down here in Panama and the only thing I could do with a sweater would be to look at it and wish I could wear it when there's ice and snow. If you insist on sending me something send me something to eat. As I've been in the army long enough to be an old soldier, good things to eat are just about what I prize most.

As my regiment no longer has a permanent post you will receive letters from time to time telling you of the changes in my address. Where we are actually going nobody knows I do hope though that we are going to take a crack at the Japs. I happen to be an Automatic rifleman and my greatest pleasure is going to be when I Zero that B.A.R. in on those treacherous little yellow men.

I really don't know what to tell you about my surroundings because I don't know what will pass the censor so I'll just tell you a little something about Panama. The one thing of course that makes Panama important is the canal and I guess you all know that the Climate is hot and sultry, after you've been here a while you come to know why South American people take Siestas in the afternoon. The terrain is mostly hilly, with a few swamps and lots of jungles which is another thing that Panama is noted for because of their treachery to the Greenhorn. It has two harbors located on the Atlantic and Pacific sides respectively, both are as pretty harbors as can be seen anywhere. Viewed from a distance Panama is a very scenic country and one can see some very beautiful tropical nights here.

Changes in seasons cannot be noted and the fact is that there are only two seasons. The wet season and the dry season. The wet season is the longest from April to December. You may think that you have seen some pretty good rain storms but until you've seen a Panamanian storm you don't know what rain is. The Atlantic side of the Isthmus though gets the most rain. It rains there almost incessantly during the wet season and every once in a while during the dry season. In the other hand the Pacific side is comparatively dry the year around. This I guess is Panama and are a part of the Continental Divide.

The most thing or things I should say about Panama, are the diseases and insects. Most of the diseases are of the skin. Ringworm, mosquitoes, ants, spiders and scorpions. At one time yellow fever was the worst here and took a toll of many lives. It has been practically wiped out now. The worst that is left now is malaria fever, we fight that though by taking quinine at regular intervals and by wearing head nets and cotton gloves and sleeping under mosquito nets at night. All this may sound pretty bad to you, but the man that knows this country and the jungles, has ways and means of combating all of these things and therefore gets along fairly well. And the man who soldiers down here soon turns out to be a very rugged individual.

In closing I wish to thank the community again for the good work you are doing.

Respectfully yours,
P.F.C. Oscar E. Olson, Co. L.
14th Inf. Camp Pakora, Ancon, Canal Zone.

At The Roxy

This is Carole Lombard's last picture "To Be or Not to Be" with a supporting cast of Jack Benny and Robert Stack, which will be featured at the Roxy Theatre, at Lockport, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. 1. Instruction sheets. Practically every electric appliance is accompanied by an instruction sheet or tag, printed by the manufacturer. Don't throw it away—read it carefully. Suggestion: attach a small bulletin board to your kitchen wall, and pin up all instruction sheets on it.

2. Cleaning. Electric motors wear better if they are kept clean. Wipe dust and grit off the exposed parts of your appliance motors with a soft, dry cloth.

3. Keeping dry. Never allow irons, toasters, space heaters, waffle irons, or other appliances with heating elements to get wet. They may be damaged by water. Clean with dry cloth.

4. Lubrication. Electric motors should be lubricated every six months. Use six drops of light oil in each oil hole (less for small appliance motors). If motor has grease cups, use light grease, or vaseline thinned with light oil.

5. Never put off a repair! If you think an appliance may need adjustment or repair, call a service man at once. A skilful twist of his wrench may prevent a costly overhauling later.

5 ways

to make your electric appliances last longer

Now that all of us are trying to get the most out of the things we own, it is wise to remember that the electric aids in our homes were built to last. If we don't mistreat them, if we give them a reasonable amount of care, they will respond by continuing to perform their time-saving tasks through the uncertain period ahead.

Here are five simple ways to make electric appliances last longer. Tear this out of your paper—let the whole family study it—save it for reference. Faithfully carry out these five suggestions in your home, and be confident that you are adding months and years to the lives of your electric servants.

FACTS ABOUT RATIONING OF SUGAR, ETC.

Registering for sugar rationing is not compulsory but it should be done as a patriotic duty and should be done promptly to avoid delays on the last day. The only penalty for failure to register at the appointed time and place will be the considerable inconvenience made necessary fewer places of registration and the small force of registrars.

Persons hesitating to register because of a large supply on hand will gain nothing by the delay as when they do register they will be obliged under penalty, to declare the amount of sugar they possessed at the time of the original registration, so nothing will be gained. For a certain period after sugar registration dates—no one will be allowed to register.

Owners of typewriters are advised to treat their machines kindly as new machines will not be available to the general public for a long time, due to the conversion of the factories to war work. Practically no one but the Army and Navy will be able to secure regular size equipment and practically none but government agencies can secure portable machines. Under these conditions a periodic checkup by an experienced expert is suggested as a means of prolonging the life of the machines now in use.

The Office of Price Administration has established maximum prices which may be charged for used tires and for recapping tires. The price lists the dealer must post in a conspicuous place and is required to give an invoice for every purchase showing the price, quality and size of the tire. Any violation of these requirements is subject to a penalty and such violation should be reported to the Office of Price Administration, 189 W. Randolph St., Chicago, Ill. This is a result of the sale of used tires in poor condition in some cases doubling the price of new tires. The most common size, 600x16 is now pegged at $8.10, $6.65, $4.45 and $1.50 depending on the depth of the tread design, measured at the shallowest point. The grading is 4th class, smooth treads. No. 3, 3-32 or less. No 2 more than 3-32 and less than 7-32. No. 1 more than 7-32.

A LONG RECORD OF PUBLIC EFFICIENCY AND ECONOMY

HENRY LAUTERBACH

CANDIDATE FOR NOMINATION IN THE
REPUBLICAN PRIMARIES
FOR THE OFFICE OF Sheriff
OF WILL COUNTY

Here is a candidate of proven ability, integrity and good judgment, whose friends point with pride to a long period of service that marks him as an ideal type of man for voters to select for one of the most important offices in the county.

When Mr. Lauterbach took the office of Superintendent of the Will County Farm, he found a long time practice of a heavy appropriation of $4,000.00 per year for the maintenance and repairs of the Farm. From 1930 to 1939 Mr. Lauterbach has gradually reduced this appropriation, and for 1940 and 1941 the APPROPRIATION HAS BEEN ENTIRELY ELIMINATED, and the Farm is on a self-supporting basis.

In 1930, when Mr. Lauterbach took office, the cash on hand in the Will County Farm Fund amounted to $76.13. In the Farm report for 1941 the cash on hand and the accounts due totaled $8,433.26. For the past 12 years these reports have been recorded by Mr. Lauterbach.

In October, 1937, Mr. Lauterbach called a meeting of the Will County Board of Supervisors and with their cooperation the fee of $2.00 per week was increased to 40c per day against each township, county or other responsible source, for care of inmates at the Farm and also those who were taken to the hospital. Thru this 40c per day per inmate and the income from the Farm the following expenses were paid in 1941:

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Unreality" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, April 5th.

The Golden Text was, "If a house be divided against itself, that house cannot stand" (Mark 3: 25).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "For ye see your calling, brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called: But God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty; That no flesh should glory in his presence" (1 Cor. 1: 26, 27, 29).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "At present mortals progress slowly for fear of being thought ridiculous. They are slaves to fashion, pride, and sense. Some time we shall learn how Spirit, the great architect, has created men and women in Science. We ought to weary of the fleeting and false and to cherish nothing which hinders our highest selfhood" (p. 68).

Honey Flavors This Fruit Bran Bread
(See Recipes Below)

Substitute Foods

Most vital question every homemaker is now facing is how to substitute certain available foods for shortages. Sugar shortages and reduced supplies of fats, oils and certain imports make it necessary for every one of you to revise your meals in some respects and use substitutes.

Although sugar rationing is to be in effect, you will still be able to get some of it. There are also good substitutes for it such as honey, molasses and corn syrup all of which may be used very easily for cooking and sweetening purposes. Still another excellent source of sugar is in the dried fruits which you can use for dessert to get your daily quota of sugar.

Select recipes which have less eggs, sugar and butter, for although there may not be an actual shortage of all these items, they may be expensive.

Fats are extremely valuable in the current emergency, and you are advised to save as much of fats and oils as you can. Be sure that your butcher puts in all the scraps of fat and trimmings off the meat you buy. You can take these pieces home and clarify them for use in frying, flavoring or actual cooking.

If you have blithely discarded the scraps of butter off the butter plates after dinner, lunch or breakfast, then remedy your habits immediately. Even if you do not use the butter scraps as table butter, these can be used for flavoring vegetables, or in larger amounts for cooking and baking purposes. Be sure the butter is kept in the icebox or at least in a cool place so it will not become rancid.

Butter and its substitutes will be available, but you should plan to use these foods sparingly. You can substitute the corn and vegetable or even mineral oil for salad dressings if you are unable to obtain olive oil.

Cheeses which have been formerly imported are available only in limited quantities, but American made cheeses are coming to the fore, the Bleu and Camembert cheeses being of excellent quality.

Soybeans are becoming a popular, nutritious food during the current emergency. Here is an excellent recipe for:

Soy Bean Yeast Bread.
(Makes 1 loaf)
1 cup milk
1 cake compressed yeast
2 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon fat, melted
1 teaspoon salt
3 1/2 cups wheat flour
1/4 cup soy bean flour

Lynn Says:

With new equipment at a premium, you will be a wise homemaker if you give the best care possible to the pieces you already have.

Disconnect electric appliances by grasping the plug itself, not by pulling on the cord. When washing electrical equipment such as coffee pots or toasters or waffle irons, wipe with a cloth rather than immersing in water.

Scouring pots and pans with steel wool pads impregnated with soap, after each meal during which you use pots and pans, will keep them bright and shiny longer.

Keep sulphur away from silverware to prevent tarnish. Eggs, matches, salt, fruit juice and even rubber tarnish silver quickly. When washing cutlery with wooden handles, be careful not to let the handles stand in water or they will become loosened.

Grease new pans before putting them in the oven and they will never rust. For rusty pie tins, rub a raw potato with cleansing powder on it to get rid of the rust quickly.

To sharpen scissors cut a fine grained piece of sandpaper into strips.

This Week's Menu:

*Old Fashioned Boiled Dinner
Pineapple-Nut Salad
*Fruit Bran Bread
*Baked Pears Cookies
Coffee Tea Milk
*Recipes Given

Scald milk and cool to lukewarm. Pour over yeast and sugar in mixing bowl and let stand for 1/2 hour. Add melted fat and salt and the flours, beating them in well. Knead the dough for about 10 minutes on a lightly floured board. Cover and let rise in a warm place for 1/2 hour, then knead again for 1 minute. Repeat the rising and kneading process twice more. Shape into a loaf and let rise again in a greased pan until double in bulk or about an hour. Bake in a hot (400-degree) oven about 50 minutes.

Honey or molasses along with fruits rich in carbohydrates contribute to the sugar content of this fruit bread:

*Fruit Bran Bread.

1 egg
1/4 cup honey or molasses
1 cup buttermilk
2 cups flour
1 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 1/2 cups bran cereal
1/2 teaspoon soda
1/2 cup chopped figs
1/2 cup chopped dates
1/2 cup raisins
1/2 cup chopped nuts

Beat egg well, add honey or molasses. Add bran and buttermilk. Sift the dry ingredients and add to first mixture with fruit and nuts. Stir only until flour disappears. Bake in a greased loaf pan with waxed paper placed at the bottom before the mixture is poured in. Set the oven at moderate (350 degrees) and bake bread for about 1 hour.

Simplicity will be the keynote of meals so in keeping with that theme, I am including two desserts using fruit flavored with honey.

Broiled Grapefruit.

Wash and dry grapefruit and cut in half crosswise allowing 1/2 grapefruit per person. With a sharp knife cut around and under the entire pulp being careful to leave all the membrane on the shell. Cut down each side of each section loosening each section completely. Lift out center section or core. This leaves only the separated sections in the shell. Spread the top of each half with honey and dot with butter. Place under a broiler flame in moderate oven until honey begins to caramelize and all ingredients are blended together. Serve hot.

*Baked Pears.

(Serves 8)
8 pear halves
1/4 cup lemon juice
1/2 cup honey
1 teaspoon cinnamon
2 tablespoons butter

Arrange pears in a shallow baking dish. Pour over lemon juice and honey. Sprinkle with cinnamon and dot with butter. Bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven until tender, 20 minutes if uncooked pears are used.

*Old Fashioned Boiled Dinner.

(Serves 8)
5 pounds corned beef brisket
1 white turnip
1 head of cabbage
8 onions
8 carrots
8 potatoes

Cover meat with cold water and heat rapidly to the boiling point, then remove scum and reduce heat. Simmer until tender 3 1/2 to 4 hours. Prepare vegetables, cutting turnip into eighths. Peel potatoes, carrots and onions. About 45 minutes before meat is done add vegetables and cook them until tender.

Serving Well Cooked Food.

Warm plates for hot main dishes and well chilled plates for cool salads and desserts can put over the simplest meal and make it a success. A few bits of canned leftover fruit with a dab of leftover jelly will make meat platters an attractive garnish, or sprigs of parsley, watercress, or celery tops for meat and vegetable platters do big things to tempt weary appetites.

THE STUDY OF A MINUTE MAN

The Minute Man came into being at Concord and Lexington. He was so called because the question of hours didn't bother him when trying to win a war.

With him a minute was 60 seconds and even if it ran into 62 he didn't demand overtime.

When his country wanted him, a minute's notice was plenty.

He was so loyal he would even take your version of what time it was.

The Minute Man was a Minute Man and never a Four-Minute Egg. He realized that a minute is a long time when somebody's life is at stake.

He knew a minute was 60 seconds and not subject to change without notice.

He knew there were 60 minutes in an hour but he acted as diligently as if he were afraid there might be only 59.

He stood ready to fight at a minute's notice but didn't squawk if he got only 30 seconds.

He never put off till the morrow the bull's-eye he could make today. He never heard of the word complacency, but if it had been explained to him he would have thought himself guilty if he had stopped to look around between shots.

His slogan was, "Don't shoot till you see the whites of their eyes!" but he gets 'em now when he senses the black of their hearts.

When life and liberty were involved he knew no form of compromise that didn't depend on marksmanship. The Minute Man hadn't even a half second for an appeaser.

He was no luxury hound even when the going was good, and when the going was tough he thought he was well fixed if he had a fair supply of dry powder and bullets.

He never left to any committee, agency or board anything he could do himself.

He never confused an attack with an appropriation.

To a Minute Man every minute counted in the job of licking the foe and he never argued over hours.

He didn't worry about the peace until he had won the fight.

It never entered his head that he could do his duty in a free-for-all fight by buying some stamps, appearing at a benefit or offering to spend two hours on a roof every other week, unless he was over 60. Nothing would have disturbed him less than a reduction in luxury transportation, less rubber in his suspenders and a room in which the temperature got below 70.

He knew all the Indians were in the woods and not in his legislative bodies. He was brave and rugged but he thought one war at a time was enough.

He never called his fight a "defense" effort and was always out to lick the fellow who started the trouble.

He didn't need long and frequent speeches to make him understand he was in a battle.

In his most desperate minutes the Minute Man never gave any part of a minute to worrying about his morale. It would have taken too many hours.

The Minute Man was an all-year-round man every second.

NEW IDEAS for Home-makers

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

LONG before we were threatened with the necessity of blackouts window draperies were hung well over walls to give rooms a sunny spacious effect. The same idea may now be used to keep light in at night. A cornice taking the place of a picture moulding is smart for both modern and traditional rooms and gives anchorage near the ceiling for rod, or pole.

Real Happiness

You will not rightly call him a happy man who possesses much; he more rightly earns the name of happy who is skilled in wisely using the gifts of the gods, and in suffering hard poverty, and who fears disgrace as worse than death.—Horace.

This sketch shows how one homemaker made cheerful, soft green sateen blackout draperies, repeating a tone in the chintz of the new slip covers. They are edged with cotton cord fringe in a darker tone.

NOTE: Use your head and your hands to keep up morale on the home front. Mrs. Spears' new BOOK 8 will help you. It contains 32 pages of step-by-step directions for novel economical things to make from things you have on hand or from inexpensive new materials. Send your order to:

The True Role

The true role, in determining to embrace or reject anything, is not whether it have any evil in it, but whether it have more of evil than of good.

There are few things wholly evil or wholly good. Almost everything, especially of government policy, is an inseparable compound of the two, so that our best judgment of the preponderance between them is continually demanded.—A. Lincoln.

THINGS for you TO MAKE

BLITHELY unconcerned over the pretty picture she makes is this little colonial girl, who is "as busy as a bee" all the week through. Her gay cross stitch sunbonnets and hoop skirts swish busily through the daily tasks, meanwhile providing interesting embroidery for tea towels.

Two matching panholder motifs complete this delightful set, which combines speedy running stitches with the crosses. Z9404, 15 cents, is the pattern for these motifs. Send your order to:

Origin of Dum Dum Bullet

A dum dum bullet is a partially steel-cased bullet with a soft core that expands as it tears through flesh, says Pathfinder. Because of the mushrooming of the core it aggravates the injury of the wound.

Use of dum dum bullets was officially condemned by the International Peace conference of 1899. Their name derives from Dum Dum, a town near Calcutta, India, where they were first manufactured by the British for use against fanatical native tribesmen who refused to be stopped by ordinary steel-jacketed bullets.

We Can All Be EXPERT BUYERS
● In bringing us buying information, as to prices that are being asked for what we intend to buy, and as to the quality we can expect, the advertising columns of this newspaper perform a worth while service which saves us many dollars a year.
● It is a good habit to form, the habit of consulting the advertisements every time we make a purchase, though we have already decided just what we want and where we are going to buy it. It gives us the most priceless feeling in the world: the feeling of being adequately prepared.
● When we go into a store, prepared beforehand with knowledge of what is offered and at what price, we go as an expert buyer, filled with self-confidence. It is a pleasant feeling to have, the feeling of adequacy. Most of the unhappiness in the world can be traced to a lack of this feeling. Thus advertising shows another of its manifold facets—shows itself as an aid toward making all our business relationships more secure and pleasant.

TO REPUBLICANS OF THE THIRD CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT:

Don't overlook the importance of electing men to the offices of TOWNSHIP COMMITTEEMEN and STATE CENTRAL COMMITTEEMAN who will represent YOUR interests. We must all fight to restore REPUBLICAN patronage to REPUBLICAN workers.

Candidates picked by the bosses in smoke-filled back rooms are not going to represent YOU if elected. Vote for men you KNOW have a creditable record of party loyalty, sincerity and interest in the rank and file of the party. If we are to "Smash Kelly-Nash" and give the people LOWER TAXES, decent government, honest leadership and a square deal we must begin to put our own house in order.

☒ Wm. R. Crow

FOR STATE CENTRAL COMMITTEEMAN FOR THE THIRD CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT

Mr. Crow is a lawyer, well known in Southern Cook County; a graduate of Northwestern University; a former assistant states attorney; a war veteran and Legionnaire; party worker for over 35 years and knows the problems of and is pledged to cooperate with all township and precinct committeemen.
